The system can be an integral part of your daily business activities. It is the basis of your work and your activity in general. Such a system requires various devices, for example, a computer, a scanner and a printer, besides many different peripherals that are absolutely indispensable in the office. However, there are quite a number of problems that you will encounter when you try to organize your system. You could get stuck in technical issues or just annoyances. If that happens, do not worry as there are a lot of powerful programs that could help you in these situations. Let's start from the beginning - when you need to get the computer. The main tasks of the computer system The central computer in a company is a tool which is used for various tasks that must be done in the office. All your work will be saved on the central computer - a memory card, a hard drive or a magnetic storage. The system has to serve as a basis of your daily life and needs to run flawlessly, but there are quite a number of troubles that are not uncommon. When you come to the office or are on your way there, the first thing that you should do is to find out whether your laptop has sufficient hard drive or not. If you have no idea how to check this, just open the task manager and click on the system process. Next, you need to open the file explorer and navigate to the following place: "C:\Windows\System32\drivers\etc" Then, right click on the first file and click on the rename button. The content of this file will be displayed, so you could change the name. If your PC has several hard drives, you should choose the one that is used for the main system. To determine this, you should open the properties of your computer, right click on it and choose the Device Manager. After that, click on the Disk Drive tab and look for the drive with the letter E in its name. Once you get to the right hard drive, you should open the properties and click on the Disk Management tab. You should see two drives - a system drive and a drive with the letter E in its name. The main problem that you will face when you buy a new computer is selecting the right memory card. The motherboard
